 UPDATE ON THE POZNAŃ PROJECT *****

by Łukasz Bielecki <bielecki@man.poznan.pl>

Dear Poznań Project Friends,

Here you get a quick overview of the Project's progress over the last two months.

The Brazilian/Portuguese language version was added in March (thank you, Gilberto!) and it will certainly well serve the large Brazilian community with Poznań roots.

Another useful feature has been created: the results of a search are now linked, by parish name, to complete parish descriptions including geographical information and listings of available records and microfilms. This information is extracted from my Genealogy guide located at:
<http://www.polishroots.org/genpoland/posguide.htm>.

The new function allows you to access the information necessary to locate the actual record on a microfilm immediately upon receiving its database entry. This should help avoid comments of the type "Who could help me find the full information on this couple?" often being added to the entries.

Ca. 20% of Roman Catholic and 10% of Lutheran marriage records from the project timeframe are already in our database. We have more than 900 comments added to the marriage entries. I encourage everybody to add comments to all entries you find relevant to your research. They not only help with correcting or completing the information contained, but also contacting other genealogists working with the same family. Still, please note that posing general questions there is useless, as the comments are only linked to their respective marriage entries and can only be read by someone who comes across them.

Here is the list of new parishes which were added to the database in the last two months (as usual, new material has been added to some of the older ones, too).

Catholic:

Budzyń, Pępowo, Kobylagóra, Ceradz Kościelny, Mchy, Konary, Prochy, Bagrowo, Iwno, Siekierki, Czerlejno, Odrowąż, Bieganowo, Wenecja, Dalewo, Siedlec (Babimost), Pakosław, Koło, Siedlec (Środa), Śmieszkowo, Lgiń, Kaszczor, Ciosaniec, Chrzypsko Wielkie, Giecz, Bytyń, Gułtowy, Grodziszczko, Łabiszyn

Lutheran:

Piaski [Sandberg], Kostrzyn [Kostschin], Pobiedziska [Pudewitz], Rejowiec [Revier], Rakoniewice [Rakwitz]

I appreciate very much all donations sent to the Project!

And finally, my special thanks to Andre Switala, who has already transcribed over 10,000 marriage records for our database. Welcome to the 10K club!

Best regards,

Łukasz Bielecki

Editor—In addition to Łukasz's report, I wanted to repeat a note Elyssa Kowalinski posted to various Polish genealogical mailing lists that contains information important to all involved with the Project. I thought it bears repeating here, in case any of you missed it:

As you may have seen either in an update message here or on the site itself, the Poznań marriage records indexing project is now up to the amazing amount of over 115,000 marriage records — that's 19.5% of ALL Catholic marriages and 9.5% of all Lutheran marriages recorded in the area between 1835-1884. In the last year, the project has really begun to pick up speed. Many Poland-based researchers are now using it and have started indexing places that the LDS haven't filmed, and more parishes are being completed every month.

But with the tremendous growth of the project, the temporary server it's located on is now struggling to cope. Without a new, paid server, the newest indexes cannot be uploaded; to do so would ruin the ability of the site to work for the indexes it already has. Łukasz has been appealing for donations to expand the site for some time now, but unfortunately users of the site have been unresponsive. That's why I'm sending this e-mail out to a few of the message lists: to explain why the site needs donations, and to ask those who may have considered making a donation in the past, but never did, to consider it again.

To make donating easier, Łukasz now has a PayPal account. So even small amounts are now gratefully accepted. In addition, with thanks to some very generous volunteers, the possibility now exists for particular films to be indexed quicker in exchange for a minimum donation to the project (parishes and marriages that fit the place and timeframe of the project only — the list is at <http://www.man.poznan.pl/~bielecki/mrecords.htm>) . If you are interested, please e-mail Łukasz Bielecki directly <bielecki@man.poznan.pl> to discuss this.

The volunteers who've worked on this project have been able to give up many hours of their time to help those who have none. If the project has helped you, please consider the time that you've been saved in your research and what it might be worth - and donate to the project.

May all your ancestors be locatable, :)

 LETTERS TO THE EDITOR ***

Subject: Gen Dobry vs. Dzień dobry!

Editor—This note refers to my response in the last issue to a person who wanted to correct the spelling of Gen Dobry!

As they say, if you can just reach one person than it was worth it. Your explanation on the phrase Dzień dobry! vs. the title Gen Dobry! might be one of those times. Since I don't speak Polish, I didn't notice the double meaning/spelling at all. I am usually good at this. For example, Debbie Greenlee has a Polish Genius Yahoo! Group which uses the same "gen" concept. Methinks, I was not the only one, however.

Debbie Raff <seraph@dc.rr.com>, who really enjoys your e-zine ...

Editor—The "Gen" pun in our title was always clear to me, of course, since, for better or worse, the title was my bright idea. Until recently, however, it never dawned on me that I might be misleading folks. But if you think about it, when you continually see something spelled a certain way, after a while you start to assume "Oh, that's the right way to spell it." I realized there was a real chance some readers might get to thinking the way you say "Hello" in Polish is "Gen dobry!" I thought I'd better speak up and clarify that. To repeat: in Polish you greet people with "Dzień dobry!," literally "Good day!" Our e-zine title Gen Dobry! is a pun based on that greeting. It's our way of wishing you "Good gen[ealogy]!"

Subject: The Sanok area

I have just been reading the current Gen Dobry! and there are so many great ideas to follow up on I am not sure where to start. However I do have some questions for you.

I am interested in reading about the history of the Sanok area (From the dawn of history to the present time! ... as an old school book on art history proclaimed!). The biggest problems are my inability to read Polish (a fairly large problem) and a lack of materials regarding this rather small and out-of-the-way place. Do you have any suggestions for something I could read (and where to get it)? Also I would like something on the typical Polish peasant in the Sanok area (not too specific am I)?

Do you have any suggestions? I live in Cincinnati.

Sandy Maher <Sjmaher5697@aol.com>

Editor— I don't have any ideas, but chances are some of our members do. What do you say, folks? Can you give Sandy some leads?

Subject: Gen Dobry! and midnight oil

What a great issue. Lots of tips. I cannot imagine how you can put together this issue each month. You must spend lots of time burning the midnight oil!

Betty Bellous <bmbellous@sbcglobal.net>

Editor—I'm glad you liked the last issue. As for burning the midnight oil, there really isn't much of that involved, because I do a little work on Gen Dobry! each day. Every morning, as I read through posts from the various mailing lists and publications I subscribe to, I save anything that I think our readers might be interested in. That way, at the end of the month, all I have to do is go through the saved notes and put them together. Add a feature article or two — many of which others write and send me, bless them! — and it's done. Putting each issue together takes maybe five hours at most. So it's fairly easy, because I don't have to do it all at once.

But if it looks like something that took lots of time, great! That's a real compliment, and I never turn down a compliment.

Subject: History of West Prussia

Editor—In the last issue there was a note from Richard Warmowski <rwarmowski@yahoo.com>, talking about his interest in the history of West Prussia. Here was a response sent to Richard and CC'ed to me, and I thought others might like to read it:

I'm not really sure whether I should thank you for the Gen Dobry! article Fred published as it has led to sooo much more for me to read... :-)

If you have not already found these sites there is plenty that may be of interest to you:

<http://web.ku.edu/~eceurope/hist557/index.htm>

and

http://www.findarticles.com/p/articles/mi_qa3686/is_200308/ai_n9252213/pg_2

(for some strange reason I cannot get to the rest of the article if start with a page one link??? Accompanied by infuriating advertising alas.) Also some interesting comments on this page...

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/User:Halibutt/Archive13#partition_of_poland_maps.3F

What I am really looking for is more social history centred on regions around Bomst (Babimost), and in English, as I hope to visit this region in the summer.

Kind regards,
Bronwyn Klimach <bronklimach@gmail.com>

 HELP TEST THE NEW FAMILYSEARCH.ORG *****

A recent issue of EOGN (Eastman's Online Genealogical Newsletter) had an interesting article on how the Family History Department of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (also known as Mormons) is working on improvements to the Website familiar to most of us at www.familysearch.org. Eastman says several new tools are available for beta testing, on a Website called "FamilySearch Labs." The idea is, if the testing proves successful, the features will be implemented on the Familysearch.org site.

If you're interested in helping test these tools, you can read more here:

 DOCUMENTARY "OUR POLISH STORY" *****

Editor—Ceil Jensen (<http://mipolonia.net>) sent out this note to keep us posted on a forthcoming documentary

Keith Famie has posted a video trailer for the forthcoming Detroit documentary "Our Polish Story". The premiere dinner is June 10th and the broadcast June 16 and 17.

Please take a look: <http://www.ourstoryof.com/polish/trailer.html>

I think it will bring tears to your eyes, as it did to mine, when Zofia salutes the military statue! She was marked for assassination during World War II, accused of being a Russian spy. Her underground pseudonym was Inga.

Luckily, the captain decided to marry her instead!

Regards,

Ceil

 HUMOR *****

Editor—On the Lithuanian Genealogy mailing list, Richard Gostautas <gostautas@gmail.com>, the President of the Lithuanian Global Genealogical Society, posted a note that gave a lot of us a smile.

Greetings everyone,

Been playing catch up on e-mail after a very busy week but ran into the following, which I found to be quite humorous (laughter is always a good thing). Please enjoy it:

- 1) Go to Google maps: <http://maps.google.com>
- 2) Click on the tab at the top of the page for “Get Directions”
- 3) In the first box enter: New York, NY
- 4) In the second box enter: Vilnius, Lithuania
- 5) Click on the button “Get Directions”
- 6) Review the directions and pay close attention to Step 23)

Editor—Just now, when I looked again, the most important direction was Step 24, not Step 23. But that’s all right: whatever number it is, you’ll know it when you see it.

<http://www.doukhobor.org>

Jonathan J. Kalmakoff recently asked me a question about a Polish surnames, and added that he had done quite a bit of work on his Website, devoted to the Doukhobors. He has pages devoted to surnames, Russian terms, research sources, and so on. If you have Doukhobor ancestors, or would just like to find a site that gives you some good information on Russian terms, take a look!

http://www.mapywig.org/viewpage.php?page_id=7

On the Herbarz list “Eduard Wojciulewicz” <eduard@eswo.org> praised the quality of the maps available at this site, the map archive of the Military Geographic Institute, 1919-1939. I think we’ve mentioned this resource before, but it’s well worth bringing to your attention again.

<http://www.pcmag.com/article2/0,1895,2111680,00.asp>

This is a link to a PC Magazine article on Google’s My Maps service, which lets you create personalized maps you can share with others. It says you can “view the map in Google Earth (including the Hybrid and Traffic map views); mark locations on maps using various icons; trace shapes, paths, and areas; add HTML code; and add text, images, and YouTube/Google Videos.” I can see how this might be a way to share information on ancestral villages with others, or spice up an online presentation on family genealogy. I thought it was worth mentioning for those with mad multimedia skills (which, unfortunately, does not include me). Also, the page devoted to “monster sightings” is interesting and good for a laugh....

http://www.birchy.com/GenWiki/index.php?title=GoogleEarth_Parishes_Project

Along those lines, this is a site James Birkholz mentioned on the Posen mailing list, of which he is the administrator. To quote the page itself, “View the latest version of the GoogleEarth PlaceMarks file. You must have GoogleEarth installed to view the file. The sample images below, show most of the Lutheran parishes of Kreis Kolmar. Note the tree at the left showing that only the Lutheran Parishes are selected, but that Catholic, Jewish, and civil registries can be viewed. Also note that each parish is labeled with the date of earliest records and the parent parish, if it split off from one. The second image show a portion of the map enlarged. If you haven’t yet used GoogleEarth, this gives you an idea of what it does.” I find it pretty impressive. If you have roots in this area, this can be a great resource. If you don’t have roots in this area, the PProject may give you ideas for what you can do for your own ancestral region.

<http://www.holocaustchronicle.org/>

On the newsgroup soc.genealogy.jewish Fran Segall posted this link, which has online the entire book The Holocaust Chronicle, 800 pages and over 1,800 images. This not-for-profit project will surely interest to many of our readers.

<http://www.harmoniypfe.org>

On the Polish-Genius list Debbie Greenlee gave this URL, the site of the Harmony Polish Folk Ensemble, a new Polish dance group in the Buffalo, New York area. Debbie added, “Though new, the group has grown to 70 members, including children! I was surprised to find that even today, new groups are forming with the intent of advancing Polish folk culture and that kids are joining ... Sign their guest book. Give them encouragement.”

<http://www.ourroots.ca/e/toc.aspx?id=1563>

On the Galicia_Poland-Ukraine list “Galicia Forever” pointed out that you can now go online here and read the book Galicia and Bukovina: A Research Handbook About Western Ukraine, Late 19th and 20th Centuries, published 1990, by Prof. John-Paul Himka from the University of Alberta (Canada).

<http://deseretnews.com/dn/view/0,1249,660205784,00.html>

Also on that list Laurence (Lavrentiy) Krupnak mentioned this link, where you can read more about the ongoing project to digitize the records collection of the Family History Library. You can volunteer for the project here: <http://www.familysearchindexing.org/en/index.jsp>. You know it won't be long before people are griping their heads off about how the volunteers botched the job — you can prevent that by signing up to do it right in the first place!

<http://www.kalter.org/search>

Logan Kleinwaks <kleinwaks@alumni.princeton.edu> posted a note to the newsgroup soc.genealogy.jewish, explaining that on his site he has made available searchable forms of three Silesian business directories recently digitized by the Silesian Digital Library (www.sbc.katowice.pl). The scans of the directories area available on the SDL site, but they're not easy to search. That's what Logan's site offers: advanced search functionality. For details read the FAQ at www.kalter.org/searchfaq.html.

<http://www.genealodzy.czestochowa.pl/>

Poles are getting more and more interested in genealogy! Ceil Jensen <cjensen@mipolonia.net> posted a note to the Poland-Roots list mentioning this site, the Website of the Genealogical Society of the Cześćochowa Region, founded on 3 April 2007.

<http://www.ixquick.com/>

On the Polish American Forum Pat <stargazer21659@yahoo.com> mentioned this search engine, which can handle 15 languages, including Polish. Sometimes we forget Google isn't the search engine around, and for specific kinds of searches it may not be the best. If you're having trouble finding what you're looking for, another search engine is always worth a try! In fact PC Magazine recently had an article “11 Ways to Search Without Google,” available at <http://www.pcmag.com/article2/0,1895,2115492,00.asp>. I'm not saying we should abandon Google, only that we should remember there are alternatives worth exploring.
